Subject: Automated Reply Re: Rebuttal to A.G. Sulzberger's May 13th opinion column "A Free People Needs a Free Press"

Thank you for your letter to The New York Times. If your letter is selected for publication — in all editions (print and online) or only online, and possibly in The International New York Times as well — we will contact you within a week.

We regret that because of the large number of submissions we are not able to respond to all of them, other than by this automated reply. (You will receive an auto-reply only once every four days.) Check the list below so you can re-route a message to another department if appropriate.

Letters should ideally be 150 to 250 words and may be shortened to fit allotted space. They must be exclusive to The Times (no prior publication in other news outlets, except for nytimes.com). They should generally refer to an article that has appeared within the last seven days.

We reserve the right to edit all letters, and to trim to fit allotted space. If your letter is too long, please re-submit it at the word count mentioned above.

Letters should include the writer's name, address, current location (where you are writing from) and daytime and evening phone numbers at your current location (for verification, not publication). If you have a disability, we will make every effort to make accommodations in our communication with you.

We do not accept anonymous or open letters, with rare exceptions.

We generally do not publish more than one letter from the same writer within any 60-day period, but reserve the right to be flexible. (This applies to the daily letters page, but feel free to submit letters to the weekly sections.) If we select your letter, you consent to our right to republish it, in any and all media.

If you submit your contact information as a result of this automated reply, please re-send the letter with it. (In the subject line, please indicate the headline of the article you're responding to, and delete "automated reply.")

Because of computer security concerns, we do NOT accept attachments; they will NOT be opened. Please re-submit your letter pasted into the body of an e-mail message.
